RANDOLPH

Court Ball Friday Evening Was a Decided Success in Every Way.

The court ball, given by the sanatorium aid society, was a decided success and Randolph people have never witnessed a lovelier sight than was exhibited in DuBois & Gay's hall on Friday night. The judges for awarding the prizes for the different costumes were Mrs. C. F. Moulton, Mrs. Mary Strong, Mr. Gladding, superintendent at sanatorium, and Dr. H. M. Chase of Bethel, who awarded them as follows: first prize, for the most beautiful ladies' costume, evening dress of white, Miss Winifred Chadwick; second prize, white silk princess dress, Mrs. Merchant; first prize for harvest costume made of crepe paper, with giraffe of corn, and hat trimmed with wheat, grass and bright fruit with ribbon in shades of yellow in hair, Miss Emma Raymond; first prize to the prettiest girl's dress, red accordion plaid skirt and representing a poppy, Helen Blanchard; prettiest boy's costume, page's attire, Loren Eldridge; first prize to the most beautiful gentlemen's costume, pink silk with trimmings of gold lace, V. A. Grant; most beautiful home-made costume, cavalier style, first prize to J. P. Tewksbury; young ladies' dress with most work, Miss Gail Lamson; first prize most ridiculous child's costume, a court jester costume, Jennie Jerd; and a boy's costume of the same style, the young song of Mazzolini, the ruit dealer. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served in the Masonic anti-room, and the net proceeds will amount to nearly $125.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Scott of Barre spent Sunday in town, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Treiser.

Miss Clara Bean is home from Barre over Sunday on a short visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bean.

Mrs. Ann Vaughan, an old lady living with Mrs. Alfred Eaton, is very ill with the prevailing distemper of gripe.

Mr. Charles Greene left town on Sunday for a visit of a few weeks upon relatives in Massachusetts, some of whom he has not seen for twenty-five years.

Elmer Bean of Barre came to Randolph Sunday and entered the sanatorium for an operation for appendicitis. He was accompanied by Mrs. Bean and the nurse, Mrs. Young, who is to attend him during his illness. Dr. Francis Ligouri of Barre and Dr. Steele of Montpelier will be the surgeons.

Miss Ida Flint has just completed her studies at the Bryant & Stratton school in Boston and has received her diploma. After a few days spent in looking up the various typewriting machines, she may return for a short visit to her mother, Mrs. J. P. Cleveland, after which she will at once take up a position.

The meeting of the Good Templars' lodge, held on Friday, was one of the most pleasant and profitable since the organization of the lodge. Five new members were voted upon, but the initiation will not occur for two weeks in order to give members of the local lodge an opportunity to attend the district meeting to be held at Barre on Friday night.

A fair attendance gathered at the regular meeting of the orange Saturday evening. Mr. McKenney from Maine, who has been speaking in the last week before the agricultural state society, was present and addressed the meeting. He gave a very interesting and practical talk on certain points pertaining to agriculture, and took his audience with him through it all, being a very fascinating speaker.

Excellent Advice to Young Men and Women on Saving the Pennies

It is a fact that people in general have little conception of the cumulative power of compound interest.

Money at compound interest grows night and day, ceaselessly, and when compounded semi-annually grows to an extent that very few realize unless they have taken the trouble to figure it out.

How many young men there are that waste, in ways that are often worse than useless, the hard earned dollars of their younger days and come down to old age in poverty!

How few young men there are who could not at the age of fifteen begin to save at least ten cents per day!

Even this moderate sum, if placed at semi-annual compound interest, would produce surprising results.

Here is what it would amount to at four per cent, compounded semi-annually, commencing at fifteen and continuing until the ages of 25, 35, 45, 55, 65 and 75.

At 25 years of age	$ 445.64
At 35 years of age	1,107.84
At 45 years of age	2,091.84
At 55 years of age	3,354.01
At 65 years of age	5,726.72
At 75 years of age	8,935.26

How few men there are who reach the ages above named, who are worth these sums!

As a rule savings banks decline to accept less than $1 from any depositor, but the Hyde Park Savings Bank is glad to accept any deposit, however small, believing that a savings bank pass-book in the hands of the youth of either sex stimulates the saving habit.

Young man or young woman start an account; start it today, that it may draw interest from Jan. 1st. Deposits made in this bank on or before February 15th draw interest from Jan. 1st. Send the few change which you happen to have in your pocket, be the amount a dime or a dollar, and be the owner of a savings bank pass-book.

The difference between penny and wealth at the age of fifty is oftentimes only the difference between owing $20 and having $20 to your credit in the savings bank when you reach your 25th year. Keep out of debt; save the pennies.

Money may be sent to the Hyde Park Savings Bank with perfect safety either by registered letter, express money order, postal money order or check, and bank pass-book therefor will be returned by first mail.

A GAME OF CHECKERS.

The Move One Player Made and His Subsequent Soliloquy.

"It's your move," she smiled.

He smiled back at her, his hand hovering above the checkerboard.

"Really?" he asked, looking at her in a witty sort of way.

"Hub-hub," she softly answered.

"Really?" he asked again.

"Hub-hub," she breathed and demurely dropped her eyes.

His success began to intoxicate him, and he felt that never before had he been in such strong form, never had his wit been so keen or his manner so engaging. His spirit soared, and he looked upon his opponent with a kindling eye.

"There!" he said, making his move at last.

"There?" she asked, giving his ejaculation the appearance of having been conceived in subtle humor. "There?"

"There!" he repeated.

She made eyes at each other, and they moved one of her men. He briskly moved one of his.

"No, no," she faintly murmured.

"You must take me."

"I must what?" he cried, making a motion.

"Take me!" she whispered.

"Take you?"

She nodded her head without looking up, and the next moment he had taken her and two hearts beat as one.

"And will you always think of me?" she asked as he was bidding her good-by after he had measured her finger for the ring.

"How could I help it?" he asked.

"Always!" she insisted.

"Always!" he repeated.

"Will you think of me as you go home tonight?"

"Every step of the way."

They parted at last.

"He loves me!" she whispered to herself. "Oh, he loves me! I knew it from the first. Maybe this won't make some of them jealous! And I'm the first girl he ever loved, and it's to be a diamond band! Oh, oh!"

And as he walked home he turned a troubled face up to the moon, halted suddenly and addressed the night:

"When she began that funny business about taking her I ought to have sat tight and kept my fool mouth shut; that's what I ought to have done!"—Kansas City Independent.

FOREST FIRES.

The Watchful Rangers and the Way They Fight the Flames.

In almost any of the western mountains the traveler sees the fire warnings of the forest service, and he is likely to meet some of the rangers. You will find them crossing the high Sierras in California, in the Crazy mountains of Montana, among the Olympics in Washington or following the old Apache trails along the mesas in Arizona. Wherever he is, the ranger keeps a keen lookout for the smoke of forest fires, and in the clear western atmosphere even a little smoke column can be detected from afar. As soon as he discovers it the ranger takes his ax and shovel and goes as only a western horse and rider can. Many small fires are stopped by this watchfulness, but there are others which take many men many hours to subdue. A fire in a chaparral so thick that a man can hardly force his way through it and parched by six months of drought makes hard and trying fighting. Then there are fires in the big timber among the dead trees of old woodlands and overhead fires that spread faster than a man can run. If unchecked, they will burn for weeks over thousands of acres of timber.

And all this destruction may be caused by a carelessly left campfire or a match dropped from horseback. The sheep men used to set the forest on fire purposely, for the year after a fire the burned acres yield fine forage. Happily this practice is discontinued. Sparks from locomotives now set more fires within the national forests than any other cause. Camping parties are the next worst offenders. Indiana, stockmen, miners and lumbermen who travel continually in the forests very seldom leave campfires to spread and do damage. They know too well the results. For a time almost every year the citizens of Portland, Ore., lose sight of some of the great mountains around the city on account of the smoke from the burning forests. There is little doubt that since the white man settled in the west more timber has been uselessly burned than has been cut and used.—Arthur W. Page in World's Work.

The Drama of London's Fog.

There is a whole world of drama bound up in the chronicles of London's fog. This misty and mysterious visitant, far older than Gog or Magog, which used to visit the watches of the night when the metropolis barely lifted itself out of the surrounding marshes, has a fund of comedy as well as tragedy.

Countless murders have been committed under its sheltering cloak, men and women have been waylaid, children have been torn from their mothers and wives from their husbands, but on the other hand there are a few incidents of a less harrowing character.—Strand Magazine.

A Startling Dish.

Over in Chelsea a schoolteacher was engaged in her task of teaching a class of foreign children the English language. She was trying to make her pupils understand the meaning of the word fright and asked if any one in the class could give a sentence containing the word.

Quick and confident was the reply of one little girl: "I have a sentence, teacher. We had fright eggs for breakfast this morning!"—Boston Herald.

Mrs. Elsworth—I suppose at some time in your life you struggled with the Nibelungenlied?

Mrs. Gaskell—Oh, yes; I had an awful stage of that only a few years ago. I had to take all kinds of nasty medicines before I got it out of my system.—Chicago Tribune.

SPURIOUS ANTIQUES.

Many Forgeries Clever Enough to Deceive the Experts.

In the manufacture of antiquities the forger shows an ingenuity that is unlimited. Furniture, prints, china, pictures, plate, armor, ivory, bronzes, tapestry—all are most successfully imitated. Many such imitations are, it is true, clumsy enough, but a great many deceive even the initiated. The experts of national museums have been imposed upon more than once.

The British museum bought a Pallas plate for $250. While an attendant was handling it one of the seals attached to its back, attesting its genuineness, became detached, disclosing the mark of a modern French potter. Terra cotta figures of Isis and Osiris, bought by the same institution for thousands of dollars, were discovered to be composed of modern clay. There is one forger of antiquities whose specialty is old leather jacks; another produces horn books; still another turns out medieval manuscripts; a fourth, clerical vestments of the middle ages, and so on.

An expert of the Smithsonian institution was called upon not long ago to pass upon a specimen of a mummy servant, an effigy, in a plastic material, such as the Egyptians buried with their dead. Close examination proved it to be made of putty. It was a very clever forgery.

Count Tyskiewicz, a noted judge and collector of antiquities, gives some interesting details of the forgeries that have been attempted from the earliest times. No metal lent itself so easily to this work as gold. Etruscan jewelry has been largely manufactured in Italy, but Syria has carried on the most extensive forgery of gold works of art. Forgeries in silver have been less successful.

A good story is told of a forged silver cup in Rome that purported to have come from some secret excavation in Sicily. This "ancient" cup was ornamented with a circular bas-relief representing the frieze of the Parthenon. In the height of his innocence the forger had given the frieze in its present ruined condition. The cup obtained an immediate success—shouts of laughter.—St. Louis Republic.

CORNMEAL.

Varied Joys of This Rich and Versatile Product.

But cornmeal is such a rich and versatile product that it lends itself to all days and all meals. For breakfast it can be turned into batter cakes light and luscious, or into waffles that melt in one's mouth, or into muffins which take on new sweetness in their tin boundaries, or you can have your corn in the shape of grits, yellow with butter and of happy digestibility.

Then for dinner there is the corn pone, large, brown and hot from the oven, ready to be seasoned with a sauce of butter and washed down with freshly churned buttermilk, with an accompaniment of cabbage or collards or turnip salad or new snap beans. If for any reason the corn pone is not desirable, though the farmer cannot imagine anything that can take its place with a healthy and an expectant appetite, there are the dumplings to fall back on, the dumplings boiled with a mass of greens. This dish is a time and space saver, and there is also a butter savor. The dumplings should never by any chance be allowed to grow cold before serving. For supper there is the hockcake, which should be of a generous thickness, and it should be eaten with gravy distilled from the juices of a country cured ham, or, if you please, a dish of mush and milk. And then, the day's work being over and done with, the tired man or woman and the children, weary with play, may fall on their couches and forget in sweet and dreamless slumber the grisly troubles of the world.—Joel Chandler Harris in Uncle Remus' Magazine.

Law Points.

The court of appeals at Frankfort, Ky., reversed the decision of the lower court in the case of Hertle versus Riddle, holding that the Louisville cemetery is for the burial of human beings only and that it is improper for a pet dog to be buried in a family lot.

The conductor of a freight train is held in Vassor versus Atlantic Coast Line Railway company (N. C.), 7 L. R. A. (N. S.), 950, to have no implied authority to engage the services of a person to assist in handling freight, for which he is to receive passage on the train, so as to entitle such person in case of his injury to hold the carrier liable as an employer.

Tales of Cities.

The London county council has nearly 40,000 employees.

Sydney, with a population of 538,800, is the largest city in Australia.

The most crowded city in the world is Paris. There are 2,731,000 inhabitants in its 10,275 acres, so that every acre theoretically holds 142 persons.

When the great engineering work of supplying New York city with water from the Catskill region is completed, there will be delivered daily 200,000,000 more gallons of water than the present Croton supply affords.

His Tribute.

A Boston man avers that in a certain New England churchyard there is a tombstone bearing an epitaph that never fails to bring a smile to the face of the reader. It runs thus:

"To the memory of Clara Ann and Sarah Jane, his two wives, this stone is erected by their grateful widower, Henry H. Harkins. They made home pleasant."—Harper's Weekly.

Retrenching.

"I tell you, they are retrenching." "But they still have their auto." "Which they run well within the speed limit. Bah!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.
